The Style Invitational

Week LXXXIX: Taught Language

Lessons learned from the movies:

1. A detective can solve a case only after he has been suspended from duty.

2. Most laptop computers are powerful enough to override the communications system of any government agency.

3. The Eiffel Tower can be seen from any window in Paris.

This Week's Contest was suggested by John O'Byrne of Dublin, Ireland. Come up with lessons learned from (1) the movies, (2) popular songs, (3) romance novels or (4) the comics page. First prize winner gets a handsome bronze key chain from Oral Roberts University, a value of $25.

First runner-up wins the tacky but estimable Style Invitational Loser Pen. Other runners-up win the coveted Style Invitational Loser T-shirt. Honorable mentions get the mildly sought-after Style Invitational bumper sticker. Send your entries via fax to 202-334-4312, by e-mail to Insers@washpost.com or by U.S. mail to The Style Invitational, Week LXXXIX, c/o The Washington Post, 1150 15th St. NW, Washington, D.C. 20071. Deadline is Monday, July 23. All entries must include the week number of the contest and your name, postal address and telephone number. E-mall entries must include the week number in the subject field. Contests will be judged on the basis of humor and originality. All entries become the property of The Washington Post Entries may be edited for taste or content. Results will be published in four weeks. No purchase required for entry. Employees of The Washington Post, and their immediate relatives, are not eligible for prizes. Pseudonymous entries will be disqualified. The revised title for next week's contest is by Thos. Witte of Gaithersburg.

REPORT FROM WEEK LXXXV,

in which you were asked to supply evidence that you are spending too much time (1) at work, (2) on the cell phone, (3) online or (4) watching TV. In reading the entries. The Czar got the uncomfortable suspicion that many were based on personal experience. A lot of people came up with dialing "9" from home, for example, or saying "BRB" when they leave a room. Special mention, but no prize, to Ingrid Wrausmann of McLean, who proposed a fifth category: signs you are spending too much time in your car. Ingrid says she recently found herself fumbling to put on her seat belt. In a movie theater.

And yes, many people said a sign of watching too much TV is being very, very depressed. We understand.

♦ Third Runner-Up: Sign you are spending too much time online: You feel the need to tilt your head to the side to show people you are smiling. (Patrick Sheehan, Wheaton; Jessica Henig, Takoma Park)

♦ Second Runner-Up: Sign you are spending too much time online: You can imitate, with perfect pitch, your modem's dial-up process, including the khhhsshhhhkkkhhKHHHHHHHshkhh part. (Gretchen Kelly, Grand Isle, Vt.)

 ϕ First Runner-Up: Sign you are spending too much time at work: Your boss says you are spending too much time at work. (Mike Moore, Gaithersburg)

♦ And the winner of the brass and velvet award from the police department of Bangladesh: Sign you are watching too much TV: You notice Oprah seems to have lost a pound. (John Burton, Herndon)

♦ Honorable Mentions:

Sign you are spending too much time at work:

Your wife is attempting to get conjugal visits with you at the office. (Chuck Smith, Woodbridge)

Your kid screams, "Mommy, that man in all those pictures around the house is in the living room, watching TV!" (John Burton, Herndon)

You keep hearing about all this terrible "D.C. traffic," but you've never seen it. (Brian Foster, Fairfax)

The night janitor has already taught you all the irregular verbs in his native language. (Jim Pearson, Alexandria)

The plants water you. (John Kammer,

You are Marty Schottenhelmer. Way too much time, but don't worry, it won't last long. (Russell Beland, Springfield)

Your dog lives full time at the kennel. (Mike Genz, La Plata)

When you walk around your neighborhood, the Neighborhood Watch folks track you. (Mike Genz, La Plata)

You tell your kids to send Santa a requisition. (Frank Balsinger, Takoma Park)

You start laundering "just a few little things" in the ladies' room sink. (Judy Wheatley, Laurel)

You have more food in the office refrigerator than in the one at home. (Jennifer Hohnson, San Jose, Calif.)

Turns out that the family picture on your desk, which you thought came with the frame, is yours. (Art Grinath, Takoma Park)

Sign you are spending too much time on your cell phone:

You have phone sex with your wife, and when you hang up you notice she is lying next to you. (John Burton, Herndon)

You added 20 minutes to your commute to avoid driving through bad cells. (Bob Sorensen, Herndon)

You never wear more than one earring. (Jeanie Kunkel, Fairfax)

Sign you are watching too much TV:

The absence of a laugh track in real life makes you feel uncomfortable and lonely. (Brian Foster, Fairfax)

You know the local cable ad rotation so well that you can announce confidently what the next commercial will be. (Brian Foster, Fairfax)

First you restart the warp engines, THEN you realign the phase inverters. How many times do you have to e-mail those idiots at "Star Trek"? (Joseph Romm, Washington)

Your conversations are filled with familiar little catchphrases—not that there's anything wrong with that. (Jessica Lynne Mathews, Arlington)

Sign you are spending too much time online:

You watched your child's graduation ceremony over the Internet by hacking into the school's video security system. (Bob Sorensen, Herndon)

When you venture outside, you are amazed at how good the resolution is.
(Bob Sorensen, Herndon)

Every now and then you look up in disgust and say something like "When are they going to put something new out there on the Web?" (Russell Beland, Springfield)

chance with Anna Kournikova. (Mark Young, Washington)

Hm. Maybe I CAN enlarge my pe it's certainly worth a giance at their literature . . . (Joseph Romm, Washington)

u have forget all the rulz of grammer speling punctation ect. (Tom Witte, Gaithersburg)

You are amazed at how fast the graphics load is on TV. (Frank Balsinger, Takoma Park) Your very best friend on Earth is someone you have never actually met. (Judy Wheatley, Laurel) You double-click the garage door opener. (Pete Hughes, Alexandria) When you read a book, you find yourself waiting a minute or so for the next page to download. (Bob Furey, ROFLMAO! WTF kind of Q is that? BTW, IMHO being online is NP. TTFN :). (Jim Cochrane, jcochrane@cox.rr.com)

Next Week: Esteem Unction

TELL ME ABOUT FF

TELL ME, From F1

about going to a battered-women omen's group.

n'der-ful adj, causes wonder.

I wonder when harassment became "well-meaning."

I wonder when he'll upgrade from automotive vio-lence to domestic violence.

I wonder if you realize that the best thing you can do for your courage and your mental health is to stop hiding behind money, friends and house keys and start taking better care of yourself. Call 1-800-799-SAFE, get referrals to a local domestic-abuse center as well as a good therapist, and get out, get out, get out.

Not the word I would have chosen, but, you're right, what a wonderful guy.

I was interested in a friendly assistant at my pets' vet. Yesterday I called and ed if she was single (yes), and would she like to m then said she had to go to attend to a client but woul call me back. She never did: l and that was that.

Today I received in the mail very nice note, dated BEFORE I d her out. What gives? Did she think I should call her back h she said she v call me? Did she accept only because I caught her off-guard at the office, and saw no as the easiest escape? Then why the personal note? What lesson can I draw for future date ns? The episode mak propositions? The episode makes we think that women, like Russia (to borrow from Churchill), are a le wrapped in a mystery inside an eniona

—Blown Off in New Jersey

Making sure I've got this straight: You liked her, and called her. She, apparently, liked you, and wrote you a note. You agreed to meet for lunch.

Speaking of riddles wearing enigma suits, one just sat on my desk: Why haven't you just called her back?

My old college ro parted on very had terms (or) think so, since we weren't exactly speaking). At the time, I didn't realize how bitchy I was; i have to say, though, she was pretty bitchy, too. Now i keep thinking about looking her up to

QUESTION FOR YA: HOW SERIOUS WERE YOU WHEN YOU SAID YOU'D RIP THE LIMBS OFF THE NEXT GUY WHO TOUCHED YOUR EX-GIRLFRIEND - AND WOULD THAT APPLY TO YOUR BEST, BEST, BESTEST BUDDY IN THE WHOOOOLE WORLD? I GUESS THAT'S TWO QUESTIONS, pologize and maybe just to see how she's doing. It's hard to get objective advice from my other friends because they are blased against her, having now heard What do you think? Look her up? o her and me a favor and let it go?

—Unable to Be Objective

In the time you've spent undertaking microscopic group analysis of the fibers of this isanalysis of the inders of this is-sue, you could have looked her up, called her, apologized, caught up, enjoyed or regretted your decision, picked up your dry cleaning, waxed your car and if you're anothing but comand, if you're anything but completely inept in the kitchen, thrown together a halfway decent red sauce.

Carolyn:
Which do you think is more important for couple-happiness:
shared

nd/interests/points of view, or depth of feeling and ability/willingness to commu

-Mistakes Were Made

Yes. Did those "mistakes" involve settling?

Carolyn: I need some guidelines for dating a good friend's ex-girffriend. He broke up with her about a year ago after two years of dating. They don't talk anymore. Will I definitely ruin my friendship with him? Should I ask his permission? Should I talk with

--D.L.

Can I borrow my sister's pants?

Why am I asking you? Your friend will know how he feels about your wooing his estranged. People aren't possessions, so "permission" is icky on principle—but telling him that ou wanted to be the one to tell you wanted to be the one to ten him you were going to ask her out, in case he had any ob-jections, is a great way to ask without asking. Besides, there's without asking. Besides, there's never any harm in hearing somebody out, especially a good friend—especially a good friend who stays when girls come and go—and objections are sometimes legit.

Write to Tell Me About It, Style Plus, 1150 15th St. NW, Washington, D.C. 20071 or tellme@washpost.com, and join Carolyn's live discussion at noon Fridays or 3 p.m. Mondays at washingtonpost.com/ liveonline.